THE HPU SERVICE LEARNING PROGRAM

“Systems of Service in Island Societies”

Hawai'i Pacific University's Service Learning Program will respond to the following areas of need identified by the Hawaii / Pacific Islands Campus Compact: health education and promotion, senior care, and environmental stewardship. This initiative is a cross-curricular collaboration of the School of Nursing, Social Work Program, College of Natural Sciences, and College of Communication. In addition, this initiative fosters collaborations between at least 28 faculty, 500 students, and over 130 community agencies statewide to provide service to the community.

The Health Promotion and Education Project will involve sophomore and senior student nurses in community health promotions and both individual and group health education activities.

The Senior Care Project will assist seniors with health information, activities of daily living, interactive contact, discharge planning, case management, counseling, and other activities to enhance healthy aging.

The Environmental Stewardship Project will track changes in carbon dioxide accumulation and ocean movements in Kaneohe Bay and will use effective environmental communication strategies to make this data available to public and policy makers at state, national, and international levels.

Service Learning at HPU involves students working with nonprofit organizations and businesses in the community as part of their course work and university programs.

Service Learning is an innovative teaching and learning strategy that integrates service into course curricula, highlights reflection, responds to compelling community needs, and develops students' academic skills and sense of civic responsibility.

The HPU Service Learning Community Partners Directory is designed to give students and faculty a vital link to local community partner who have expressed an interest in having HPU students volunteer at their organizations.

FOCUS ON SERVICE LEARNING

Students doing research aboard the HPU Research Vessel, Kaholo.

"Everyone wants to do something that matters. When I was in high school, everyone talked about "the real world" and how we would get active in the "real world" after high school. Service-learning got us involved in the real world while we were still in high school. It let us do things that were important and let us see that what we were learning was important to solving real world problems."

"Never doubt that a small group of thoughtful, committed citizens can change the world. Indeed, it's the only thing that ever has!"

- Margaret Mead

"I shall pass through this world but once. Any good therefore that I can do or any kindness that I can show to any human being, let me do it now. Let me not defer to neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again."

- Mahatma Ghandi

"We are prone to judge success by the index of our salaries or the size of our automobiles, rather than by the quality of our service and relationship to humanity."

- Martin Luther King, Jr.

" My service-learning experience opened me up to many new ideas, experiences, and people. Not only have I made a positive contribution to my community, but I have learned more about myself and my abilities. My service-learning experience has also played a larger role in shaping my career goals by giving me the basis to explore the kind of work I want to pursue in the future."

- Renee Richie, B.A. University of Minnesota, 1999

" Rather than running around between classes, work, meetings, and my community site feeling incredibly disjointed, I was able to integrate my academic and civic interests through service learning"

"By its very definition, civic responsibility means taking a healthy role in the life of one's community. That means that classroom lessons should be complemented by work outside the classroom. Service-learning does just that, tying community service to academic learning."
